1. Heidelberg Colloquies on East Asian Art History Ruprecht-Karls-Universität Heidelberg

One third of the funding was devoted to colloquies held at The Institute of East Asian Art History at Heidelberg University (Institut für Kunstgeschichte Ostasiens an der Universität Heidelberg). About thirty researchers who were writing their theses in the field of East Asian Art gave papers. The purpose was to give them a forum where they could present their work in progress, to offer them an opportunity to learn about each others' topics and methods and to establish international standards in the field. Applications were solicited from Europe, America and East Asia. Based on written thesis proposals, the selection was made by a committee of three professors from more than one country. In addition, one senior specialist was invited to each colloquy to give a lecture. Selected theses have been published. One young researcher took charge of the preparatory work for the colloquies, which were entitled the Heidelberg Colloquies on East Asian Art History.

The First Heidelberg International Colloquy on East Asian Art History took place from 14th-17th September 2006. Sixteen Ph.D. students from ten countries were selected from fifty three applicants. The young researchers were: Xin Chen (University of

2. Buddhist Stone Inscriptions in North-China Heidelberger Akademie der Wissenschaften

The research project is carried out in collaboration with the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities (Heidelberger Akademie der Wissenschaften – HAW). This institution supports long term research on Buddhist inscriptions engraved in stone in China. The research project's principal aim is to fully document these inscriptions. The Ledderose-Balzan research project is exploring methods of presenting the inscriptions to the scholarly community, and how to make them known and intelligible to a wider audience. This involves developing new methods of digitizing the inscriptions and presenting them visually. One of the aims of the project is a scholarly catalogue for a public exhibition of these materials. A recent outcome of this research project is the exhibition Herz der Erleuchtung. Buddhistische Kunst in China 550-600 / The Heart of Enlightenment. Buddhist Art in China 550-600 organized for the centenary of the Museum für Ostasiatische Kunst, Köln (Germany). The catalogue contains a Preface by Adele Schlombs and essays by Lothar Ledderose, Claudia Wenzel and Suey-ling Tsai (Heidelberger Akademie der Wissenschaften), Liqun He (Archaeological Institute of the Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing) and Petra Rösch (Museum für Ostasiatische Kunst, Köln.). Since funds still remain, work will continue on this for a number of years, with the results presented digitally.
